Les Journalistes font un travail “remarquable” en couvrant les élections chargés au Sénégal

L’élection présidentielle au Sénégal constitue un défi sérieux pour ce pays — un défi aussi pour les journalistes couvrant cet événement. Surtout avec la violence qui a éclaté après que le président sortant Abdoulaye Wade a été autorisé par le Conseil constitutionnel à briguer une troisième investiture jugée illégale par l’opposition qui évoque la limitation des mandats par la Constitution à deux.

Dans ce conteste difficile marqué par le chaos politique, les journalistes ont vécu beaucoup de contraintes, subissant des parfois des violences.

Story on Alcoholism Leads to Liquor Co. Campaign Against Underage Drinking in Mozambique

by Mercedes Sayagues

Alcoholism and binge drinking are serious problems here in Mozambique. Among the vile, cheap and lethal spirits sold – those with high alcohol content and low price, guaranteed to hit you like a punch from Rumble in the Jungle - the most popular is Tentacão (which means temptation, in Portuguese), less than US$1 for half a pint. Other brands are Lord Gin, Double Punch, Boss, Rhino and Paradise. The cheapest, Lord Gin, with 43% alcohol, costs US$1 for half a liter.

Though underage drinking is technically illegal here, no one seems to check.

Mercedes Sayagues

Knight International Journalism Fellow, Mozambique

Mercedes Sayagues is a Knight International Journalism Fellow who is building a network of health journalists in Mozambique with the skills to produce regular coverage of life-threatening diseases and health challenges. She created the first-ever health section at the influential weekly Savana, which features stories on issues such as AIDS, cholera and maternal mortality.

She is a journalist, media trainer and researcher who specializes in HIV and AIDS, health, gender, human rights and humanitarian issues. She is fluent in English, Spanish, Portuguese, French and Italian.

A South Africa-based media trainer and freelance journalist, Sayagues was chief editor of the Web-based information service PlusNews' Portuguese service from 2005 to 2008. Supported by the UN, PlusNews is the largest source of news about HIV/AIDS in Africa. Sayagues built the news service, identified and trained a network of correspondents, edited their stories and produced her own, managed the Web site, published a quarterly magazine, oversaw production of rip-and-read radio programs, produced a training manual on reporting on AIDS, and developed partnerships with AIDS actors in Angola, Mozambique, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau and São Tomé and Principe.

She was a freelance journalist based in Zimbabwe during the critical 1994-2001 period, reporting for South Africa's Mail & Guardian, along with other news organizations.

Nigeria: Create New Health Section at Daily Trust newspaper

Sunday Dare is launching a health section at The Daily Trust, the most widely read newspaper in northern Nigeria. He is creating new online resources on the paper's website, including information on health services and a comprehensive database of health experts. Working with Freedom Radio in Kano, he also is starting a health program in an area where misinformation caused people to refuse polio vaccines, leading to an increase in polio cases.

Through a new health journalism association, Knight International Health Journalism Fellow Sunday Dare has begun a year-long fellowship through ICFJ to improve both the quantity and quality of health reporting in Nigeria.

Dare is an award-winning investigative reporter, multimedia journalist and media trainer with more than two decades of experience in the United States and Nigeria. He spent eight years at the Voice of America in Washington, D.C., where he headed the Hausa-language service that broadcast to more than 24 million listeners in West Africa. At VOA, he managed a multi-year health journalism project that used news programming, town hall meetings and radio dramas to improve public understanding of malaria, measles and polio.

"You have placed invaluable gifts there on the Internet. They are inspiring and practical manuals that push you to want to act. I now want to start a discussion forum for young journalists especially in the areas of ethics. I don't think a "Thank You" is enough. I have not been able to leave my country to get modern journalistic experience, but at least with these manuals, I have a feel of it."

Memory Reconstructs Society and Reestablishes Rights

In a simple house made of wood and straw and smelling of earth, women, girls, and the occasional man narrate, sometimes laughing and other times crying, the stories of how their life used to be before being forcibly displaced to San Juan Nepomuceno. This is one of the many local memory initiatives taking place throughout Colombia today.

We are an international non-profit organization specializing in the field of transitional justice. ICTJ works to help societies in transition address legacies of massive human rights violations and build civic trust in state institutions as protectors of human rights. In the aftermath of mass atrocity and repression, we assist institutions and civil society groups—the people who are driving and shaping change in their societies—in considering measures to provide truth, accountability, and redress for past abuses.

- Provide family planning counseling and services at the same time and location where women receive treatment for complications related to abortion. Many postabortion clients have a clear need and demand for family planning, and strong evidence demonstrates that providing family planning services at the same time and location where women receive postabortion treatment is feasible, acceptable, and effective.
- Train, equip, and support community health workers (CHWs) to provide a wide range of contraceptive methods. CHWs can be an important means of reducing inequities in access to services, especially in areas where individuals face physical and social barriers to health services.

Ethiopia

K4Health's work in Ethiopia has focused around a qualitative assessment of health information needs. The needs assessment process:

- Explored the current family planning/reproductive health (FP/RH) knowledge management system;
- Examined the available resources and opportunities at different levels of the health system;
- Identified areas for improvement; and
- Provided informed suggestions.

In addition, the study employed a relatively new social network analysis and presentation tool, Net-Map, which assisted in the analysis and visual presentation of the data.

The study was conducted in Oromia, Amhara, Afar (regional level) and Debreberhan, Gondar, Arsi, and Awash (zonal/woreda levels). There were a total of 17 individual interviews, 4 group interviews, and 2 focus group discussions. The Net-Map methodology was used to explore the family planning and reproductive health (FP/RH) information exchange network and its influencing factors.

Findings showed a shortage in skilled staff in the FP/RH arena, lack of familiarity with national policy and strategy documents, and confusion regarding the authority of RH actors–for example, participants were confused about which organizations had direct authority over others, and to whom organizations should submit reports on RH activities.

The paper on the Ethiopia needs assessment results has been accepted for presentation at the American Public Health Association (APHA)'s annual meeting to be held in San Francisco, CA, USA, in October 2012.

Welcome to the mHealth Working Group website. The group, which started in 2009 with 20 members in Washington, DC, is now an international community of over 700 members in 35 countries. Our mission is to frame mobile technology within a larger global health strategy. By applying public health standards and practices to mHealth, we promote approaches that are appropriate, evidence-based, scalable and interoperable in resource-poor settings. The goals of the mHealth Working Group are to build capacity, encourage collaboration and share knowledge.

Please join us for our monthly meetings, held in Washington, DC. Virtual participation is encouraged. You can view the past meeting minutes and presentations on our mHealth Toolkit.

In the mHealth Toolkit you can also find resources on the latest mHealth research, including peer-reviewed journal articles as well as gray literature. The toolkit is arranged by tab: Evidence, Behavior Change Communication, Training Health Care Providers, Country Experiences, mHealth Links and mHealth Events. You can also search by health areas: Chronic Disease, Family Planning/Reproductive Health, HIV/AIDS, Malaria, Nutrition and Tuberculosis.

The next meeting of the mHealth Working Group will be June 26 in Baltimore, MD. Lunch will be provided. Please RSVP to Laura Raney. The meeting will feature a report out from the Cape Town mHealth Summit as well as a report out from the Nairobi eHealth Summit, eMocha, and programming for the web with mobile in mind. Over lunch this new website will be presented along with the newly upgraded mHealth Toolkit. Stay tuned for more information. Minutes from the May meeting on mHealth organizational strategies will soon be available on the mHealth Toolkit.

Partnering with Leaders

We work with business and government leaders—such as President Amadou Toumani Touré of Mali—to grow their investment in malaria control to achieve the 2015 targets of near zero deaths.

Voices for a Malaria-Free Future seeks to expand national movements of powerful private and public sector leaders in Ghana, South Africa, Tanzania, and Uganda.

Together, these leaders aim to motivate African governments to use resources more efficiently to scale up malaria control, building a foundation for the elimination of malaria.
